

Welcome to Toronto!

Welcome to the 118th Joint Annual Meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America and the Society for Classical Studies. This year we return to Toronto, one of North America's most vibrant and cosmopolitan cities. Our sessions will take place at the Sheraton Centre Toronto Hotel in the heart of the city, near its famed museums and other cultural organizations. Close by, you will find numerous restaurants representing the diverse cuisines of the citizens of this great metropolis. We are delighted to take this opportunity of celebrating the cultural heritage of Canada.

The academic program is rich in sessions that explore advances in archaeology in Europe, the Mediterranean, Western Asia, and beyond. Among the highlights are thematic sessions and workshops on archaeological method and theory, museology, and also professional career challenges. I thank Ellen Perry, Chair, and all the members of the Program for the Annual Meeting Committee for putting together such an excellent program. I also want to commend and thank our friends in Toronto who have worked so hard to make this meeting a success, including Vice Present Margaret Morden, Professor Michael Chazan, Professor Catherine Sutton, and Ms. Adele Keyes.

The Opening Night Public Lecture will be delivered by Dr. James P. Delgado, one of the world's most distinguished maritime archaeologists. Among other important responsibilities, Dr. Delgado was Executive Director of the Vancouver Maritime Museum, Canada, for 15 years. He is currently Director of the Maritime Heritage Program for the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)'s Office of National Marine Sanctuaries. Dr. Delgado's lecture is entitled "THE GREAT MUSEUM OF THE SEA: A Global Tour of Some of the World's Most Important Shipwreck Archaeological Sites." Dr. Delgado is a compelling speaker, so you may expect a dynamic and fascinating account of this significant topic.

This year's Presidential Plenary Session is entitled "The Technological Revolution and Archaeology: New Ways of Understanding the Past," and is scheduled for Friday, January 6, from 8:00 to 10:30 am. The expert participants in this colloquium will argue that advances in technology do not simply enable us to do archaeology in new, more efficient ways: they are transforming the way that we think about human cultural development in the past. At the Awards Ceremony (Friday, 5:15-6:30) we will honor this year's Gold Medal for Distinguished Archaeological Achievement winner Dr. John Clarke, and many other outstanding scholars.

The AIA continues to make extraordinary progress in fulfilling its mission. This year we have acted decisively in collaboration with other organizations to counter threats to archaeological sites across the world. We took the lead in making representations on behalf of Greece before the State Department Cultural Property Advisory Committee. With many other organizations, we are celebrating the centenary of the National Park Service and the 50th anniversary of the National Historic Preservation Act. And on October 15th we celebrated the Sixth International Archaeology Day with a record 600 organizations participating worldwide.

In fiscal 2015-2016 members and friends of the AIA contributed a record $432,000 to the Annual Fund, a key element in ensuring that we maintain all our programs at the highest level. I am pleased to announce the formation of several new endowments this year, all of them in support of archaeological fieldwork by our members: The Julie Herzig Desnick Endowment Fund for Archaeological Field Surveys, The Ellen and Charles Steinmetz Endowment Fund for Archaeology to support innovative uses of technology in archaeological research, and The Kathleen and David Boochever Endowment Fund for Fieldwork and Scientific Analyses. Through the generosity of several trustees we have added over $400,000 to the Fund for the AIA, the core unrestricted endowment that supports our operations. We are deeply grateful to the donors who have contributed these funds.

The Archaeological Institute of America continues to strengthen its support for you, our members, in all your endeavors, whether they be in fieldwork, education, or outreach. Above all, we remain committed to the essential task of investigating the record of the human past and communicating those findings to the wider world.

I look forward to seeing you in Toronto!

FROM THE PROGRAM COMMITTEE

Dear Colleagues,

Welcome to Toronto for the 118th Annual Meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America. Our paper sessions this year will take you from Cyprus to Sicily and beyond; and cover topics from death to religion, and from food to coins to art. We also have a colloquium on vase paintings in Toronto's renowned Royal Ontario Museum; and workshops on such topics as balancing fieldwork and family life, and best practices in data collection, management, and analysis. This year it's also possible to attend several sessions on topics relating to provenance and cultural heritage.

We have plenty to keep you occupied for three days, but if you plan to stay after the conference ends, Toronto has a vibrant museum scene. In addition to the Royal Ontario Museum, you might visit the Art Gallery of Ontario, The Textile Museum of Canada, which contains more than 13,000 textiles from almost 2,000 years of history; or, for those who are interested in Islamic and Persian art, the Aga Khan Museum.

Enjoy the conference and enjoy Toronto.

Caere

EDITED BY NANCY THOMSON DE GRUMMOND AND LISA PIERACCINI

"Caere manages to put everything an Etruscan scholar ever needed to know about researching Caere into one place and is therefore unique in our field. It will become the definitive book on the site of Caere, and it is also highly useful as a microcosm for understanding the Etruscans in general. This is perhaps the greatest array of living Etruscan scholars that has ever been put together in one work."—David Soren, University of Arizona

SESSION 1B: Workshop

Fresh in the Field: New Research and Resources in the Study of Ancient Surface Decoration

8:00 a.m.–10:30 a.m.

City Hall

Sponsored by the Ancient Painting Studies Interest Group

MODERATOR: Elizabeth M. Molacek, Harvard University

Bringing together archaeologists, conservators, curators, and others interested in ancient surface decoration, “Fresh in the Field: New Research and Resources in the Study of Ancient Surface Decoration” is a forum to share, discuss, and generate feedback regarding the newest research. While open sessions and colloquia provide access to finished or highly developed projects, this workshop intentionally highlights research in progress, often in the very early stages.

The workshop is sponsored by the Ancient Painting Studies Interest Group (APSIG), the North American correlative of the Association Internationale pour la Peinture Murale Antique, and is a forum for all individuals researching ancient painting and other forms of surface decoration. Like its European counterpart, APSIG aims to foster communication among scholars, and with this goal in mind the workshop draws on the diverse intellectual strengths of the APSIG community to increase conversation surrounding our shared interests.

Intentionally varied in chronologic, geographic, and cultural scope, the presentation topics offer a snapshot of current research in progress by scholars in varying stages of their careers. Egan, Rousseau, and Lucore each present new fieldwork to expand our understanding of well-known sites (Pylos, Sardis, and Morgantina, respectively); Berlin and Swetnam-Burland both offer new methods for the study of familiar material (domestic surface decoration); and Lakin uses a case study to demonstrate the possibilities of three-dimensional scanning to enhance the process of reassembling wall painting fragments. Finally, Cook expands our categorization of surface decoration, discussing a preliminary analysis of pigments on the surface of lapis basanites, the popular Egyptian stone.

Although structured around seven presentations, the session will rely equally on audience feedback and participation. It is meant as a productive environment in which to discuss new fieldwork and fresh approaches and even to raise questions or problems in hopes that others in the group might have insight. Through collegial conversation, this workshop hopes to move the field forward in new and interesting ways as well as to promote a community of intellectual collaboration.

PANELISTS: Emily Egan, University of Maryland, Vanessa Rousseau, Weisman Art Museum, Sandra K. Lucore, American Excavations at Morgantina, Nicole Berlin, Johns Hopkins University, Molly Swetnam-Burland, College of William and Mary, Lara Lakin, Radboud University, and Emily Cook, Columbia University

SESSION 2J: Joint AIA/SCS WorkshopClassics, Classical Archaeology, and Cultural Heritage: Toward a Common Understanding of Professional Responsibilities for the Study of "Exceptional Objects"

10:45 a.m.–12:45 p.m.

Dominion South

MODERATORS: Elizabeth S. Greene, Brock University, and Brian I. Daniels, University of Pennsylvania Museum Heritage Center

Despite holding a joint annual meeting and an assortment of joint panels, the Archaeological Institute of America (AIA) and the Society for Classical Studies (SCS) along with their associated American Journal of Archaeology (AJA) and Transactions of the American Philological Association (TAPA) promote somewhat different approaches to the treatment of cultural heritage. With respect to its Annual Meeting, the AIA's code of ethics states: "...the Annual Meeting may not serve for the announcement or initial scholarly publication of any object in a public or private collection acquired after December 30, 1973, unless its existence can be documented prior to that date, or it was legally exported from the country of origin. An exception may be made...if the presentation emphasizes the loss of archaeological context."

AJA's editorial policy presents similar guidelines, designed to preserve archaeological context as a critical factor in an object's meaning (AJA 109 [2005] 135–36). The standards presented as part of the SCS's statement of professional responsibilities are somewhat less transparent:

"Members of the profession should abide by the 1970 UNESCO convention . . . At the same time, however, the objective of advancing knowledge about classical antiquity demands that scholars challenge unnecessary restrictions on research and publication."

Respect for the 1970 Convention falls within the spirit of the AIA's guidelines, but the SCS's statement leaves open the possibility that unprovenanced objects can be presented at the Annual Meeting and within publications of the society. In light of the close connection between the two societies and ongoing current threats to heritage as a result of current world affairs, it would seem timely to reflect on the mandates of the two societies with regard to the stewardship of heritage by professionals in the field.

This workshop aims to consider how archaeologists and classicists might reach a similar understanding of best practices in the ethical study of physical artifacts that drive research on classical antiquity. A frequent topic in recent discussions about archaeological provenance is the treatment of "exceptional objects," including papyri, inscriptions, coins, and other artifacts for which arguments have been made (1) that an object's content can provide information independent of archaeological provenance; (2) that archaeological provenance is less meaningful for objects produced for the purpose of circulation; and (3) that looting in zones of conflict over the past 25 years has resulted in the discovery of new archaeological material, some of which is too important to be ignored. In addressing such issues from a Near Eastern perspective, the American Schools of Oriental Research recently added a "cuneiform exception" to its Policy on Professional Conduct, allowing limited exceptions to its publication and presentation policy for cuneiform texts. Through a series of open discussion groups about a variety of contested objects, we hope to determine whether particular categories of objects warrant exceptional treatment in AIA and SCS venues and what factors might be considered in creating policy that balances research interests with a responsibility to combat the looting of cultural heritage and the illicit trafficking of antiquities. This public workshop is designed to include participation of scholars who work on various categories of "contested objects" from philological, historical, and archaeological perspectives, as well as those involved in the creation of professional policy. We envision the workshop as a mix of guided small-group discussion and debate rather than a series of formal papers.

Herculaneum: A Sourcebook

Brian Brennan

Publisher: Ancient History Seminars

163 pp. (2012) 6" x 9" Paperback, ISBN 978-0-9756963-3-0

This book brings the people of Herculaneum alive by means of their own writings. We encounter them through the inscriptions and painted notices that they read, the legal and financial documents that they scratched on their waxed tablets, and the erotic graffiti that they scribbled on their walls. The documents collected here illustrate Herculaneum's early history, politics, commerce, religion, and leisure as well as its destruction, its rediscovery, and the excavation of the town.

Accompanied by introductory material, notes, plans, and photographs, these translated sources will be of interest to those who plan to visit the town itself or who simply enjoy Roman social history. The documents have also been selected and arranged to cater for the needs of school and university students.

SESSION 3K: WorkshopBalancing Archaeological Fieldwork and Family Life

1:45 p.m.–4:45 p.m.

City Hall

MODERATORS: Gretchen E. Meyers, Franklin & Marshall College

Fieldwork and field-based research are integral components of an archaeologist's scholarship and academic program. It is not uncommon for archaeologists to spend many weeks each year at sites and museums far from home. While certainly rewarding, this type of research travel, which is often necessary for the advancement of academic careers in archaeology, can also pose significant challenges for an archaeologist's home life and parenting. Despite an increase of overall attention in the academy to issues of work-life balance, this particular professional concern does not generate much public discussion. For early-career archaeologists it can be daunting to even find examples of how peers manage to arrange fieldwork around family and parenting commitments. This workshop is a forum for scholars at all stages of an archaeological career to discuss and share experiences and strategies for the management of family life while maintaining an active archaeological research agenda in the field.

The workshop's moderator has recently completed an interdisciplinary study that surveyed more than 500 respondents in more than 15 academic fields about balancing an active field research program with family and parenting commitments. A short summary of data from this study serves as the workshop's starting point. A multigenerational panel of male and female archaeologists—all of whom have worked during their careers at sites throughout the Mediterranean while simultaneously balancing family commitments—will respond to the data and offer their own diverse perspectives. Particular topics to be discussed include making the decision about leaving children and family members at home or bringing them into the field, the challenges and rewards of both of these options, childcare options at home and abroad, safety, financial implications, and potential impacts on both one's scholarly productivity and family decisions. Significant time will be allotted to engage audience members as participants in a wider discussion in order to enhance the views presented and highlight additional issues. A final goal of the workshop is to foster networks of professional and peer support and formulate methods for professional organizations and home campuses to serve scholars grappling with this type of work-life balance.

This book studies the stagecraft of the Roman funeral as a complex, tightly integrated, three-act spectacular performance, in which viewing and performative priorities of one act influence those of the other two; the investigation uses 3D computer graphics, GIS, and an interactive 3D gaming system designed to document, interrogate, disseminate, and refute space-based arguments.

Donald J. Mastronarde, Preliminary Studies on the Scholia to Euripides

As a parergon to an ongoing online edition of the Euripidean scholia, this group of studies assesses problems of classification, describes in more detail than previously what may be called teachers' notes, weighs the evidence for the activity of Ioannes Tzetzes and Maximus Planudes in this corpus of scholia, and gives an edition and commentary on an anonymous compilation of teaching notes on Hecuba.

CERAMICS IN ARCHAEOLOGY

by NININA CUOMO DI CAPRIO

From Prehistoric to Medieval times in Europe and the Mediterranean:
Ancient Craftsmanship and Modern Laboratory Techniques

2 vols. / 700 pages / paperback / 24x17 cm / $ 99,00

Forthcoming in 2017

“...Ceramics in archaeology is a compendium of almost everything bearing on the interpretation of ancient ceramics, with every conceivable method considered and numerous examples described. What is more this new volume is not just a translation of what was written in Italian, but an update on what went before. Because of this, it is likely to remain a standard work for many years to come. Both the student and the more experienced researcher will benefit from this book and will find it easy to follow because of the lively presentation. The whole subject of ceramics is here, from clay acquisition to kilns and firing, backed with an extensive bibliography. It is a work of reference which should have a place on every archaeologist's bookshelf from their first day at University until retirement.” From the foreword by prof. David P. Peacock, University of Southampton, UK

The THIRD ANNUAL CONFERENCE FOR HERITAGE EDUCATORS

Join us at the AIA's Third Annual Conference for Heritage Educators. Building on the momentum of the first two conferences, this year's program will include a workshop on training the trainers and two special sessions focused on the archaeology and heritage of First Nations and marginalized groups.

We will also follow up on past initiatives, including publications, evaluations, and the creation of our statement of ethics. And as usual we will feature the always popular “Lightning Show & Tell.”

Saturday, January 7, 2017 | 8 a.m.–5 p.m.
Provincial South, 2nd Floor, Sheraton

*All AIA & SCS Annual Meeting attendees welcome!

Greek Art and Archaeology c. 1200–30 BC

by Dimitris Plantzos

ISBN 978-1-937040-57-4 (paperback) ♦ 22 × 28 cm ♦
304 pages with 580 color photos and 45
architectural plans and reconstructions ♦ paper $49.95

This lavishly illustrated book surveys Greek archaeology from the collapse of the Mycenaean palaces to the subordination of the last Hellenistic kingdoms to Rome. Its aim is to study Greek art through the material record, and against its cultural and social backdrop. The book's target audience is archaeology and art students, as well as anyone interested in Greek art and culture. Through concise, systematic covering of the main categories of classical monuments, the reader is taken to a tour of ancient Greece along the most spectacular period in its history, the first millennium BC. Architecture and city planning, sculpture, painting, pottery, metallurgy, jewelry, and numismatics are some of the areas covered.

Dimitris Plantzos is a classical archaeologist, educated at Athens and Oxford. He is the author of Hellenistic Engraved Gems (Oxford University Press 1999) and co-editor of the Wiley-Blackwell Companion to Greek Art (with T.J. Smith; 2012). He has published extensively on Greek art, the development of classical archaeology as a discipline in the twentieth century, and on modern receptions of classical heritage. He teaches classical archaeology at the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens.

This is not just another handbook on Greek art. It is longer than most, far more fully illustrated and concerned to see that even the "minor arts" are properly considered. The writer is a teacher with long experience of Greek art "at home" and in foreign museums, and able therefore to give a wide perspective to his subject. I strongly recommend it to both students and the interested public.

— Emeritus Professor Sir John Boardman
University of Oxford

This beautifully illustrated volume situates Greek art within the framework of classical archaeology and classical studies, as well as within the growing field of reception studies. Alongside sculpture, vases and architecture examples of gems, metals, mosaics, and wall-painting are provided to enrich the study of ancient visual and material culture. Plantzos interests readers in the history of the discipline, including the place of museums in historical discourse, and the importance of archaeological context. With an emphasis on terminology, a combined chronological and thematic approach, many rich contextual references, and useful bibliographies, students of many levels will be delighted to engage with this fresh and attractive introduction to the subject.

SESSION 6A: WorkshopSo You've Chosen Your Topic—What Now?: Best Practices in Data Collection, Management, and Analysis

1:45 p.m.–4:45 p.m.

City Hall

*Sponsored by the Student Affairs Interest Group*MODERATORS: Simeon D. Ehrlich, Stanford University, and Rachel G. Dewan, University of Toronto

Archaeologists, art historians, classicists, and anthropologists must collect, manage, and analyze large sets of data in their research—but little instruction is given in how to do so. From launching a database to using informational and analytical software to accessing collections and acquiring permissions, the complexities of data management are a daunting yet unavoidable part of the research process. Students rarely receive training in this crucial aspect of their work, yet research faculty are expected to have strong project management skills. Students and early-career scholars would benefit greatly from the insights, advice, and warnings of researchers who have experience working with large sets of data.

This workshop will cover key issues related to the research process. It will provide students and faculty with the opportunity to hear from established experts about best practices in approaching different classes of data, effective strategies for organizing such data, and methods for using a data set to its full analytic potential. What should be considered when designing a database? To what extent should raw data be made accessible to others? How does one secure permissions for working with restricted-access materials? How can data visualizations be used effectively, and what resources are available to help in doing so? Panelists who have worked in libraries, archives, and museums and who work with digital humanities applications, digital data programs, and image services will bring with them a wealth of knowledge and experience relevant to a wide array of interdisciplinary research subjects.

Research and data management are integral to all stages of an academic career. A thorough consideration of how best to collect, store, organize, and analyze data for research projects is sure to benefit scholars at all stages of their careers—students, young professionals, and even established scholars. An improved understanding of how to work with large data sets will lead to better planning, more focused analysis, and more coherent results. Not only will the experiences and advice offered by the panelists assist those just beginning to collect or organize data, but the discussion will leave participants with valuable lessons they can apply throughout their careers.

Did you know?

Several of the AIA's fellowships were established with gifts that cost nothing during the donor's lifetime.

There are many ways to ensure your lasting legacy and to create meaningful resources that will benefit archaeologists for generations to come.

Two simple ways involve designating the AIA as a beneficiary of either your retirement plan, or your life insurance policy. Both offer an opportunity to invest in the future of archaeological research at no cost to you. Transfer a "paid-up" life insurance policy and you will qualify for an income tax charitable deduction.

Learn more at www.archaeological.org/giving/Norton, or visit the AIA Kiosk in the exhibit hall to pick up a copy of the AIA planned giving packet.

SESSION 7I: Workshop
Researching Ownership Histories for Antiquities in Museum Collections

8:00 a.m.–11:00 a.m.

City Hall

*Sponsored by the AIA Museums and Exhibitions Committee*MODERATOR: David Saunders, J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles

Building on the success of museum-related panels at recent annual meetings, the AIA Museums and Exhibitions Committee has organized a workshop on current approaches to provenance research. In light of numerous high-profile legal cases and repatriations, together with the policies developed by the Association of Art Museum Directors and the American Alliance of Museums, there is a growing expectation that museums should make available the ownership histories of their objects in a full and clear manner. Many institutions are actively engaged in online documentation projects for their antiquities, and this workshop will explore some of the methods and results, as well as challenges and pitfalls. Researching ownership histories for ancient objects has not received the investment seen for the World War II era, and institutions often lack the resources to undertake this work in a sustained fashion. Furthermore, information in museum files is often speculative or unconfirmed, and discussions regarding the best ways of presenting such information are much needed. Through a series of case studies addressing Greek, Roman, Etruscan, Egyptian, and ancient Near Eastern artifacts, the participants will explore a broad variety of themes: objects for which ownership information has been “lost” and methods and resources for recovering it; the organization of research projects and the development of common standards; the value of terms such as “said to be”; and how the nuances and ambiguities so often inherent in this subject can be presented meaningfully to scholars, students, school groups, and the general public. More broadly, we hope that this workshop will encourage more open conversation among diverse museum professionals, academics, and field archaeologists with a view to developing guidelines and models for this work that can be shared across the community. A series of short papers will be presented from a variety of museum professionals and academics.

PANELISTS: Judith Barr, J. Paul Getty Museum, Amy Brauer, Harvard Art Museums, Paul Denis, Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto, Carol Ng-He, Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, John Hopkins, Rice University, Sarah Costello, University of Houston, Clear Lake, Paul Davis, de Menil Collection, Seth Pevnick, Tampa Museum of Art, Phoebe Segal, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Caroline Rocheleau, North Carolina Museum of Art, and Ann Brownlee, University of Pennsylvania Museum

LEADERSHIP GIVING OPPORTUNITIES

RESEARCH AND FIELDWORK

We at the AIA are committed to assisting scholars in the field and future archaeologists by offering a variety of scholarships, fellowships, and grants. This year, thanks to the support of AIA donors, we provided a record 27 fellowships and 63 scholarships for archaeological research. Three new endowed research funds were established: The Ellen and Charles Steinmetz Endowment Fund for Archaeology will support innovative uses of technology in archaeological research; the Kathleen and David Boochever Endowment Fund for Fieldwork will support archaeological field research; and the Julie Herzig Desnick Endowment Fund for Archaeological Surveys will provide funding for initial survey work.

OUTREACH AND EDUCATION

For over 130 years, we have informed and excited audiences of all ages about archaeological issues through a myriad of programs including lectures, archaeology fairs, interactive online digs, and International Archaeology Day. In the 2015-16 season, the AIA Lecture Program hosted 219 lectures that enabled top archaeologists to share their discoveries with the public. In its sixth year, International Archaeology Day programs attracted over 100,000 people to 700 educational events worldwide. Two new endowed education funds were established: The Nancy Stone Bernard Education Fund and the Fowler Merle-Smith Education Fund will both support education in archaeology for schoolchildren from third through 12th grades.

SITE PRESERVATION

We seek to safeguard threatened archaeological sites through our Site Preservation Program which encourages community engagement to help sustain conservation and preservation efforts. Twenty-nine sites are currently being aided through this innovative grant program.

For more information about giving to these programs or other areas of greatest need at the AIA, please stop by the AIA kiosk, visit www.archaeological.org/giving, or call (617) 353-8709.

AN IMPORTANT LEGACY BEHIND THEM.

This year, their estate gifts are providing much-needed fellowships to scholars and students for vital archaeological research.

Thanks to their commitment to archaeology and their gifts to the AIA, their memory and generosity will live on forever.

Plan ahead to ensure that you have a lasting impact on archaeological discovery for generations to come.

To establish your archaeological legacy, visit www.archaeological.org/giving/plannedgiving or the AIA Kiosk in the exhibit hall.

What will be your legacy?
